ico Flourish Exceedingly, Especially on Sundays.

Conditions in the republic which have crowded a million persons in Mexico City, or more than 300,000 above its normal population, have increased greatly the number of thinerant merchants who set up shop where their whim wills. It is impossible to find a street in the city where some worth of their wares.

Sunday is the busiest day for these merchants. They foregather principaliv in the plazas, spread their goods about them and patiently wait for customers. Their numbers are augmented by men and women, boys and girls, all of them selling candles, fruits, shoestrings, pottery, tobacco, drinks, bright-colored ribbons, shoes, hats dogs, cats, gophers and the dozens of varieties of food of which chili is the nost important component.

The plazas present an animated ap pearance. Bands are playing, whistles are blowing, newsboys call their editions, a man with a wheel of chance beseeches the credulous to try their luck! a boy with a huge basket balanced atop his head offers sweetmeats at 5 centavos each, and following him comes a seller of ice cream with his frozen dainties tucked away in a container which he juggles perliouxly on his head but never loses a spoonful, and above all shines a glorious sun which gives no hint of brooding problems of existence.

It is a happy life the native leads on Sunday, when with a few centavos he may fill his stomach with sweets, bask in the warm sunshine and listen to music furnished by a Mexican band.
